“Living a Life of Respect as a Married Woman”

Icebreaker: If you were to describe the perfect wife or mother, what would she be like?

A married woman has an incredible opportunity to affect lives. She has children, parents, friends, her husband, and her co-workers watching and learning or laughing at her life. What does it take to live a life worthy of respect if you are a married woman?

An Encounter with the Word of God

1. Read Titus 2:1-5. How could these teachings to men and women be considered “sound doctrine” from God?

2. What does it mean to be reverent in the way you live?

3. Who do you know that you could honestly say it is obvious they are reverent in the way they live? What is in their life that makes it obvious?

4. What should godly woman be teaching to the younger women in their house and in the church about life?

5. One of the actions NOT worthy of respect is slander and any form of addictive behavior. What are some ways these creep into a married woman’s life or a single woman’s life?

6. Read Titus 2:11-15. The grace of God, Jesus, appeared and brought us truth which we now have in the New Testament. This Word He delivered teaches us to say ‘NO’ to ungodliness and worldly desires and teaches us how to live a life worthy of respect. What are some of the lessons you personally want to share that have taught you how to live with respect?

7. God’s people are to be zealous for good deeds. What are some of the good deeds you are zealous for?

8. On a scale of 1 (yuk) to 100 (awesome) how would you rate your life in the area of being worthy of respect?
